Love In The Bean Patch
A green revolution it may not be, but it's impossible not to be intrigued by the implications of the agricultural experiment conducted this summer by a pretty Louisiana teen-ager and reported in the latest Life.

She planted two bean patches in the same soil and gave them identical treatment when it came to water and fertilizers. But one she loved, literally - cooing to the sprouts as they pushed through the dirt, reading poetry as they matured, gently washing each leaf when the plants were "dirty." The other she hated - sitting in the patch while giving off bad vibrations, wishing they'd wither and die.

The results? Life says that within a month the love-patch was five feet tall and lush with beans. The other was barely knee high, the leaves sickly yellowed, and bore only two small pods.

It's the sort of simple idea, like music for milk cows, that might revolutionize agriculture. And who knows? It might even be worth trying with people. - Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal

Incentive

Students at Towson State College in Maryland believe there's nothing like a little incentive to improve the quality of their education. They have contributed $3,000 to provide "mini grants" to faculty members who will work to improve the courses they teach.

If the idea works, it may well spread to other campuses. Many of us remember teachers we would gladly have paid, even out of our skimpy resources, to improve the courses they were teaching us. - Dallas (Tex.) Times Herald

Floorboards

A British home owner recently had a harrowing experience that could be instructive for politicians everywhere.

It seems that Edward Stainer was worried about a draft in his living room. Lifting the floorboards he discovered that there was nothing beneath the room but a gaping hole, 1,000 feet deep. The hole, he discovered, was a 200-year-old mine shaft.

In his living room, in other words, Mr. Stainer examined his position and found he literally had nothing to stand on. Wouldn't it be nice if politicians too, always looked under the floorboards? - Wall Street Journal

Says Farmers to Be Helped by Program

By TOMMY YATES

Associated Press Writer

OSCEOLA, Ark. (AP) — Harold F. Ohlendorf, president of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation, says anti-inflation efforts imposed by President Nixon last month promise to help farmers more than any other occupational group.

"They have been hurt more by inflation than others," Ohlendorf said in an interview. "Costs of production have spiraled, but farmers have been unable to pass the costs to consumers."

Ohlendorf said the exemption of interest rates under Nixon's wage-price freeze is in the farmers' interest.

"Most agricultural borrowings are on intermediate and long-term basis," he said. "Imposing a temporary ceiling on interest would result in lenders reluctant to advance credit to farmers."

There also has been speculation that processors will beat down prices to producers of farm commodities even though prices of raw commodities are not frozen under Nixon's economy measures.

"When the plan (freeze) went into effect, prices of most farm products for processing were reasonably high, so it should not have a depressing effect," Ohlendorf said. "We think that since the freeze is temporary, it should not be a big factor in processors' buying prices."

Off and Running

It's the greased pig contest at the fair—and considering the field of mud, the question might be who needs grease? A bit of old-time Americana that's still around in many places—such as Sandusky, Ohio. How did it turn out? Happily for the cash prize winners, right, messily for all and with one porker not yet quite in hand. Photos by Eugene Krebs.

Powerful Rep. Mills Is Just a Father to His Two Daughters

By DALA MCKINSEY

Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., may be described as the chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee and possible presidential candidate, but to Polly Mills he is just the father of their two daughters.

They've been married so long that when someone asks them how many years they've been together, they hesitate, look at each other and then Mrs. Mills replies: "37 years."

He's the same to me," Mrs. Mills says. "He never changed—that is one quality I admire, he never changed. He is just as much at home with one person as another."

Mills is the subject of a low-key campaign to win him the Democratic presidential nomination. He insists he is not a candidate but would accept the "mantle" of nomination were it given to him at the Democratic National Convention.

Mrs. Mills says she sees her role as "giving moral support. I'm not outspoken. I stay in the background."

"I don't speak for Mr. Mills," she said during an interview in Mills' Little Rock office. "He does a good job and a lot of it."

Mrs. Mills said she was "very much surprised" when the first talk of Mills as a presidential candidate began to catch fire. "I thought it was an honor for him," she said. "He'd like to stay where he is, but then again he just might do it."

She said she honestly did not look forward to a nationwide campaign if it should develop. However, in the years Mills has campaigned for re-election in Arkansas, she said she enjoyed stumping the district with him.

Mrs. Mills rarely misses a Congressional session, especially if Mills is speaking or has a bill up for vote.

She sits in the gallery looking down on the House floor from the same vantage point every day. She watches her husband address the House.

Near the end of the speech, he points to his watch, nods his head or makes some other gesture in her direction and she slips from her seat. That is her cue to meet him in his office or to go get the car.

Mrs. Mills says she always goes to the public Ways and Means meeting if she can understand the subject matter. Mrs. Mills and her husband hail from the tiny White County town of Kensett. She said she did not date her husband much until they went to college at Searcy, three miles away, even though they knew each other's families.

While in school she majored in English and French. In their early years together, she worked as a substitute teacher and later became superintendent of White County Schools.

Washington is interesting because "history is being made every day," she says.

Mrs. Mills said one of her most memorable incidents was being invited to a "sit-down" formal dinner at the White House.

"My first trip to a White House dinner was one of the most outstanding things that has happened," she said. "I felt like everything had to be new."

She wore a long chiffon formal with a white beaded top and white kid gloves.

"It was exciting," she said. "A seated dinner is wonderful."

Mrs. Mills said she cooks ordinary fare for her husband—beef chops, Swiss steak and chicken. But the menu in the Mills' home is also typical of Arkansas—okra, black-eyed peas and rice.

These days it gets harder and harder for the Mills family to get together. She said she often entertains members of the family at their home and she and the congressman often take long walks together.

Mrs. Mills, who is 63, says she buys most of her clothes in a shop in Searcy. She prefers tailored clothes with "the little longer look down below the knee."

Traffic Is Rerouted

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) —

Traffic in downtown El Dorado was rerouted for about five hours Thursday night when a railroad tanker car parked at the Missouri Pacific switchyards began leaking nitric acid.

Although a six-square-block area was blocked off while firemen hosed down the fumes, no one had to be evacuated. No one was injured.

Violations to Meat Processors Made Public

By DON KENDALL

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department, bowing to court orders, has made public thousands of warnings sent to meat and poultry processors suspected of violating federal inspection rules.

The disclosures were forced by lawsuits brought against the department by the Center for the Study of Responsive Law, a Ralph Nader organization.

Department officials had contended the documents were privileged information involving enforcement of federal rules and not subject to the Freedom of Information Act.

But a U.S. district court in Baltimore ruled 15 months ago that the letters and notices ordering meat detained were in the public domain. A court of appeals in Richmond, Va. upheld the order May 25.

In a cautiously phrased announcement, the department's Consumer and Marketing Service said Thursday the warning letters are used to get companies in line with federal rules and are sent "without conclusive evidence" a firm actually is guilty of infraction.

"The purpose of such warning is to correct a possible violation by voluntary compliance before it develops into a more serious problem," the agency said. "Such handling of minor violations is authorized under the inspection laws."

When violations are flagrant and the warnings ignored, the department customarily suspends federal inspection at a plant, thus depriving the company of the right to do interstate business.

The documents, estimated by one official at between 3,000 and 4,000, are open for public inspection at the department.

A typical letter, written in July 1970, involved a company suspected of using a federal inspection mark illegally on some meat. It noted the matter had been discussed more than two months earlier with a company representative.

"This matter is being directed to your attention so that you will be fully aware of the requirements of the law... and to afford you an opportunity to take any steps necessary to insure compliance," the letter said.

U.S. and Japan Disagree on Taiwan Issue

By SPENCER DAVIS

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days of cabinet-level talks have left the United States and Japan widely separated on strategy for keeping Taiwan in the United Nations while admitting Red China.

Members of the Japanese cabinet who attended a two-day economic conference with their American counterparts also parried U.S. efforts to bring a major reevaluation of the yen.

Japan demanded elimination of President Nixon's 10 per cent import surcharge, which applies to some 90 per cent of Japanese imports into this country.

The split over China policy took a dramatic turn at two news conferences late Friday. At the first, Secretary of State William P. Rogers said that if Japan failed to co-sponsor a resolution keeping Taiwan at the U.N. and adding Red China it would lessen the chances for passage of such a resolution.

Japan's Foreign Minister Tkeo Fukuda told another news conference about an hour later that he was sure the United States "has an adequate understanding why Japan cannot be a co-sponsor of the American resolution."

Fukuda also made his government's views on the China question known to President Nixon at a 40-minute meeting at the White House Treaty Room just before a dinner honoring the Japanese cabinet.

As the Japanese position was being disclosed, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, George Bush, said in Philadelphia that he expected a "very, very close" vote on the China issue next month at the U.N.

The U.S. stand, he said, was for keeping Taiwan in. And "if that means that we might have to let Peking come into the Security Council," he said, "then we will consider that, too."

Suit Is Filed Challenging Redistricting

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Atty. Gen. Ray H. Thornton Jr. filed a motion in U.S. District Court here Thursday asking that a suit challenging the recent reapportionment of Arkansas' legislative seats be dismissed.

Thornton filed the motion on behalf of the three-member state Board of Apportionment, which consists of the attorney general, Gov. Dale Bumpers and Secretary of State Kelly Bryant.

William T. Kelly of Little Rock, chairman of the Pulaski County Republican Committee, filed the suit late last month attacking the apportionment plan the board adopted July 19.

Kelly contended that the board acted arbitrarily in redistricting the state, attacked the validity of the 10 multimember districts the board established in the House and alleged that the plan discriminated against minority groups. He also claimed population variances among the new districts were too great.

Kelly asked the court to draw another apportionment plan.

Thornton said in his motion that Kelly "recites several conclusions of the law in his petition but does not allege facts upon which the principles of law can be recited."

He also said the suit should be dismissed until the litigation had been submitted to state courts for consideration because Kelly had failed to exhaust state remedies.

Thornton noted that amendment 45 to the state Constitution vested original jurisdiction in the Arkansas Supreme Court to compile the board to perform its duties and to revise any arbitrary action or of abuse of discretion by the board in apportioning the legislature.

Gresham replaces Virgil Cothren who was asked to resign in June.

Audit Reduces Total Money Questioned

By BILL SIMMONS

Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Several months of negotiation has reduced from $190,000 to less than $20,000 the amount of federal funds spent by State College of Arkansas that federal auditors had questioned.

Dr. Silas D. Snow, SCA president, said, however, that it is now obvious that the college will have to repay the federal government for some funds that had been questioned.

Snow said the amount still under negotiation is between $10,000 and $18,000 and that negotiations are continuing. He said SCA may have to pay $3,000 to $5,000, and possibly slightly more.

The office of Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., has given some assistance in the negotiations, but the congressman, Snow said, has not actually "interceded" in the situation.

Gene Goss, administrative aide to Mills, said in Washington that the congressman's help had been "the kind we would extend to any constituent with a problem."

"We have provided a medium of exchange in some cases between the college and HEW," Goss said. "It took us three months to find someone in HEW who remembered that an expenditure for such-and-such had been authorized."

The audit, which came out in September 1970, covered the period from Nov. 1, 1966, to Aug. 31, 1969.

The audit report questioned the expenditure of $112,350 by the college and set aside an additional $83,625 for further inquiry by the Office of Education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, a total of $195,975.

Snow and Goss said that auditors raised the questions because they believed there was insufficient written authorization for the expenditures.

"We were one of the first schools in Arkansas to take advantage of federal program funds," Snow said. "Back then, guidelines were vague and often inadequate. If we needed to make a certain expenditure, but didn't know whether we could, sometimes somebody would pick up the telephone and call and get verbal authorization. Sometimes authorization came in writing but wasn't seen by the auditors."

Goss said that a heavy turnover in personnel at HEW since the beginning of federally funded programs at SCA had increased the difficulties in locating the origin of authorization for some expenditures by the college.

"The college would say 'can we do this' and somebody at HEW would say 'can do' and the college did it," he said. "Two or three years later, the auditors come in and raise questions because there wasn't anything written to back it up."

Snow said the negotiation process, conducted chiefly through correspondence, had been a slow, progressive effort to "resurrect these authorizations, whether they were given orally or in writing."

Most of the problems originated, he said, on the federal end of the program system, but he said federal officials in the negotiation had been "very pleasant, gracious and helpful with no threats or bitterness on either side."

The SCA president said the college will have to pay for certain books received under a federal program. The books did not arrive until after the program period ended and SCA incorporated the volumes into the college library, Snow said.

Aquittal of Capt. Medina Denied Friday

By KATHRYN JOHNSON

Associated Press Writer

F.T. McPHERSON, Ga. (AP) — A military judge, claiming there is some "evidence as to each and every charge and specification," has denied a bid from Capt. Ernest L. Medina for a directed acquittal of My Lai murder charges.

Col Kenneth Howard denied a defense motion Friday calling for acquittal on the grounds the government had failed to prove its case and had denied Medina due process of law. The defense is to begin its case Monday.

The 35-year-old Medina, of Montrose, Colo., is charged with assault and the premeditated murder of 102 civilians during an attack on the South Vietnamese village 3½ years ago by troops under his command.

"There is some substantive evidence as to each and every charge and specification," Howard ruled.

Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey requested the directed acquittal, arguing that "no one has testified that he shot at My Lai because he was encouraged to do so by Medina."

Said Bailey: "I am at a loss to discover, in reflection on the evidence we have had so far, where the evidence is that should allow you (the judge) to let the jury go out and speculate on whether Medina should be held guilty of the killings."

The Army contends Medina chose not to intervene while his troops killed at least 100 civilians. They accuse him of personally shooting a Vietnamese woman and ordering the slaying of a boy.

The defense contends that Medina did not know his men were slaughtering civilians during the assault and that when he became aware of the shootings, immediately ordered a halt to them.

In his rebuttal to Bailey's motion, Maj. William Eckhardt, the Army prosecutor, said that the 31 government witnesses showed that Medina did not act to stop the murders.

In his rebuttal to Bailey's motion, Maj. William Eckhardt, the Army prosecutor, said that the 31 government witnesses showed that Medina did not act to stop the murders.

"He issued no effective instructions because to do so would have hurt his military career and, in so doing, abetted and encouraged the killings," Eckhardt said.

Meanwhile Friday, U.S. District Court Judge Charles Moyer in Atlanta ruled that the federal government may prosecute for criminal contempt a witness who refused to testify at Medina's trial.

A member of Medina's command group, Frederick Widmer of Lower Burrell, Pa., was cited by Howard after he twice refused the judge's orders to testify under a grant of immunity.

Army Plans a Two-division Mobile Unit

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking beyond Vietnam, Army planners hope to form a two-division mobile force ready to move swiftly from the United States in an overseas emergency.

The Army's strategic home-based reserve is well below the readiness level its generals consider necessary even at a time when U.S. policy aims at reduction of military involvements abroad.

As the United States disengages from the Vietnam war, Army emphasis is shifting to rebuilding the readiness of the strategic reserve and the U.S. 3d Army in Europe. Both took second place for years to the demands of fighting the war.

ALL STEAMED UP

It's a sight which gladdens the eyes of Japanese railroad buffs and photographers. Teams of locomotives toil across the National Railway's bridge over the Nishinokawa River near Niimi City, pulling heavy loads of freight cars, their boilers fully stoked and belching out dense plumes of billowing steam.

But recently a shrewd camera shop owner saw the business possibilities of this glorious sight. And he began to charge for use of the best vantage point overlooking the bridge from which to take photos of the trains at their gustiest.

The engineers were furious at this exploitation of their admirers and countered by putting up a smokescreen to spoil the businessman's game. They surrounded themselves with an impenetrable fog of steam as they approached the bridge and came into camera range.

There was a lengthy dispute, and negotiations took place between the businessman and the engineers, with the mediation of Niimi City officials, before freedom of the shutter was finally restored, for everyone, with no charge . . .

PERSONAL FINANCE

Before you mortgage the old homestead, hock the silverware and head for Mexico with all you can scrape together, to make your fortune in the land rush . . . pause just one moment.

Yes, it's true there's a "gold rush" on, as glowingly reported in at least one major U.S. newspaper. A new Mexican law opening the door to foreigners started the rush, and within about two months the value of property in some choice locations doubled.

Fortunes are going to be made — no doubt of it. They already have been. And as the word spreads, some earnest and plausible-sounding gentleman may present you with an opportunity to double, triple or quadruple your money. He can show you, with proof, figures like these ($ = pesos/sq. meter):

In Acapulco, beachfront

property up from $400 to $3,500 since 1965.

In the San Angel area, Mexico City: $8 in 1940, $300 in 1961, $750 in 1966, $1,500 today.

There are examples by the score. Mexico is being urbanized rapidly, as the United States was earlier in the century. Its birth rate is twice that of the United States. It has a stable, rapidly expanding economy and the peso is one of the hard currencies of the world. Fortunes will be made in real estate there as they were here in an earlier era.

What set off the reported land rush was an amendment to Mexico's constitution. Formerly, foreigners had been prohibited from owning land within 60 miles of a border, or within 30 miles of a seacoast. They could lease, only, and for not more than 10 years.

Since May, foreigners have been allowed to acquire property rights in these areas, including many of Mexico's choicest. Several large investment syndicates have been formed, and are buying land on speculation. A gold rush, yes—but before you start packing . . .

"Some of the U.S. press reports may have created an exaggerated impression of what is happening in Mexican real estate," says a reliable advisory service, "The Mexican Investor." Published in English, in Mexico City, it's registered here with the Securities and Exchange Commission as an investment advisor.

First off, foreigners are still not allowed direct ownership in the formerly restricted areas, it explains. The land is held in trust for foreign investors, for 30 years, in the central bank apparatus. The investor is entitled to all profits, from development or resale, during that period.

"A reliable notary is indispensable for the legal work," you're cautioned by the advisory service. "Careful research is important, and make sure that what you contemplate is legal."

Another item: "There is no title insurance in Mexico."

Still another caution: "A frequent lack of liquidity. You may find that you are locked in if you want to sell in a hurry."

"The Mexican Investor" has no doubts, for all its cautions, that fortunes will be made in Mexican real estate. "Average annual profits of 50 to 100 per cent on long-term investments have not been uncommon in the past," it notes, and the future looks equally bright, or brighter.

The sweater wrapcoat is one of fall's most important new looks—sew it of Acrilan's tweedy multi-color knit-by-the-yard. Wear-dated label guarantees fabric performance for a full year

STITCHIN' TIME

By JOANNE SCHREIBER

Even if you're all thumbs with the knitting needles, you can still have the important look of hand knits. The secret is knits-by-the-yard, all ready to cut, sew and go.

With these new knit fabrics, you can stitch sweater coats, sweater vests, sweater pants and even sweaters, using standard patterns.

Many of the knits are made of synthetic fibers such as Acrilan acrylic, and are completely washable. Be sure to check for the reassuring Wear-Dated guarantee. This is a real bonus for the gal who sews her own; for the first time, she is guaranteed a full refund on her yardage if the fabric does not give satisfactory wear for a full year.

Like any other guarantee, a card must be filled in and returned.

Sweater knits are quite easy to handle. Since they are tubular when rolled on the bolt, slit your yardage lengthwise to get the 54-inch width. Be sure the fabric is straight before you begin to cut. Big tailor tacks are a must, since dressmaker's carbon will not show on the textured surface of the fabric. And be sure to test-stitch a swatch to get the best stitch length.

Garments such as coats may be lined or unlined, but a knit lining is recommended, so it will have the same sort of 'give' as the knit fabric. A zigzag stitch will offer extra elasticity; some of the newer machines have a special stitch for sewing knits. If you are making an unlined garment, stabilize main seams with binding.

So if you lack the patience or talent for hand knits, check your piece goods department for knits-by-the-yard. You'll have the season's best fashions in a fraction of the knitting time.

THE GENERATION RAP

—by Helen and Sue Bottel

WHEN SOMEBODY BUGS YOU: FIGHT OR IGNORE?

Dear Helen:

Several times, when kids have written in about gross teachers they don't get along with, you've implied it's better to quietly earn your grade than fight what you can't change and risk getting failed.

Well, what do you say about a teacher who never misses a chance to poke fun at minority races? When a pregnant white girl quit school to marry her Puerto Rican boy friend, he called it "their pollution" and some of the class even laughed!

Being Jewish, I get my share of his dirty cuts and I'm not about to sit and take it! I figure an "A" from this creep would be a disgrace, though I could make one if I'd act humble. He'll probably flunk me.

Maybe you don't agree with me, Helen, but I'll bet your daughter Sue does. —FIGHTER

P.S. He never does anything "open" enough to complain to the principal about, so I take revenge by driving him bananas. With his stupidity, it's easy.

Dear Fighter:

And you win—an F, plus a year of make-up work. And this WASPish teacher will end up more firmly locked into his prejudices, because you've "proved" what he always said about those people. So all fighting gets you is the doubtful satisfaction of skewering a stupid little man who isn't worth your effort.

Maybe I'm just too practical: if you can CHANGE things, I say fight; if not, ignore. —HELEN

SUE'S VIEWS:

Dear Fighter:

Mom has a neat trick: To someone like your teacher, she'd mentally say, "Zap, you don't exist," and then get on with the course. His cuts couldn't hurt because she'd smile and look right through him.

It works for her, but I'm more of a head-on fighter, because there's always the outside chance you can change things. Like for instance I drew two "Fs" in citizenship (and stern words from home) before this teacher and I finally got to understanding each other. This year—big surprise—we're good friends.

Why couldn't you do your work, draw a decent grade, and STILL smack down stupid prejudices, Fighter? Otherwise, as Mom says, you're only hurting yourself. —SUE

Dear Sue:

Back in the eighth grade I went with a certain boy and I've always liked him a lot.

We're still friends three years later, but just friends, nothing else. I've learned to accept this. The problem is I recently heard that someone is spreading the rumor around that he is a fag. I can't believe it and won't! Or can I?

How can I stop this? Should I go to the boy and ask him straight out? —STUMPED

Dear Stumped:

If you asked a boy about a rumor like this, you wouldn't gain anything and you might lose his friendship.

Just stand by and keep on being his friend, no matter what—someone he can really talk to.

And don't get so shook. It's kind of a fad to whisper about "who's queer" these days. People don't take it all that seriously. —SUE

Mrs. Sam Goldwyn Still Pro-Hollywood

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — The Goldwyn Studio, where so many great films were made, still stands. It is a rental studio now and the sprawl of Los Angeles has thrust around it, turning the area into a generally seedy section.

But there is a refuge in the studio, a quiet suite of offices furnished exquisitely and presided over by a tall, slim, stately woman with white hair and bright blue eyes. She is Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn, still active in the studio's management and still a movie enthusiast.

Goldwyn is still alive, too, but she says he has been ill for 2½ years and doesn't go out much any more. He never goes to a movie theater, contenting himself with television.

"He watches a lot of TV," Frances Goldwyn says, "and he enjoys it. He even enjoys the advertisements."

She is just as glad he hasn't seen many movies lately. She sees many, and doesn't think he would like anything made in the last few years. She has liked quite a few of them, but she says she is "getting a little bored with all the naked backsides."

At the moment, her major excitement is over a program of Goldwyn films which have been put together for exhibition. "The Masterpieces of Samuel Goldwyn" encompasses 29 of his movies, including such greats as "Stella Dallas," "Guys and Dolls," "Wuthering Heights" and "The Best Years of Our Lives."

It will be shown at a Los Angeles theater and, hopefully, at other theaters around the country.

Samuel and Frances Goldwyn have been married for 46 years, showing that a long marriage is possible even in Hollywood, even between a producer and an actress. (She abandoned her career as actress Frances Howard when they were married in 1925.)

Goldwyn was famous for his malapropisms, almost as much as for his productions. Mrs. Goldwyn says he "pretended" that he wasn't bothered by the kidding he took over them, but she believes that underneath it did bother him.

"He was a man without much formal education," she says, "and he did say some peculiar things."

Once, she remembers, during World War II, they entertained British Field Marshal Montgomery at a dinner party.

"My dear husband," she says, "got up to make a speech and introduced the guest of honor this way—'Ladies and gentlemen, I would like you to meet Marshal Field.'"

Another time, she characterized a certain Hollywood man as a person with an "open mind." Sam Goldwyn said, "Yes, and there's nothing in it."

The Goldwyn Era of Hollywood may be over, but Frances Goldwyn isn't one of those who predicts doom for Hollywood itself. She believes the city will survive as the movie capital for two main reasons.

"Pictures are better," she says, "when they are started and ended here. The creative minds are here to start a film. And the post-production is the best here—all the technical things are better here than anywhere else."

"And, also, this is such a nice place to live. They talk about smog now. Nonsense. I have always had sensitive eyes and when I came here first, almost 50 years ago, my eyes were always tearing — and it wasn't because I was unhappy. We called it fog then, but it was smog, even though the word hadn't been invented."

She is staunchly pro-Hollywood and says her own recent life is proof that what they've always said about Hollywood's transitory loyalty is untrue.

"Even though my husband is inactive and we are not producing any films now," she says, "our old friends are still our good friends. I have more invitations, then I can possibly accept."

It is estimated that 5.3 billion bushels of corn will be grown in the United States this year. The 1970 crop was 30 per cent less.

RUNNING the Goldwyn Studio these days, since her ill. Though the height of the Goldwyn Studio's success ill maintains her enthusiasm for Hollywood.

Clean Face Helps Curb Blackheads

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I am writing you as I have a problem which I'm sure many other people have. It's blackheads. I have tried just about every patent medicine they have for blackheads to no avail. I have found out they are a waste of money and some make my skin break out. I've tried pastes, creams, oils, liquids. I've tried keeping my face very clean with soap and water. The more I do, the more blackheads I get. So I'm turning to you for a remedy that will be guaranteed to help my skin.

Dear Reader—There is a limit to what can be done for "blackheads." You are absolutely right that many of the preparations sold and advertised for this purpose do little more than cost money.

The problem begins with the normal function of the skin. Certain cells in the skin normally form oil. In animals it gives a sheen to their coat. When the oily material is deposited in an enlarged skin pore the top turns black and it becomes a "blackhead." The blackhead is not dirt. It is a chemical change in the oily material that occurs on exposure to the air. The enlarged skin pore is actually a specialized hair follicle and there is a very tiny hair in it.

There are only a few things that can be done for the naturally oily skin. Applying things externally to the skin will not stop the production of oil.

There are a number of factors that do affect the amount of oily material the skin forms. The normal formation of sex hormones in either men or women stimulate oily secretions.

So do female hormones in the menopausal years. People who have low thyroid function also tend to have oily skin.

The truth is the best external medicine for uncomplicated oily skin and the blackheads that result is to wash the face well three or four times a day and soak the skin with a warm washcloth.

Utah has more than 80 natural bridges formed by the erosion of wind and water upon sandstone removing immediately any blackheads that are visible. You should avoid any oily skin preparations or creams, since excess oil is already the problem. The difficulty is very closely related to acne or pimples.

As you have learned all the other methods and expensive creams really produce no better results, you might try wiping the skin with an alcohol sponge. Oils are soluble in alcohol and this is an efficient way to remove surface oil. It also helps reduce bacteria on the skin surface.

Today's hand was sent us by our old friend J. Edward Morrow of Joplin, Mo. Jed, a reporter for the Dallas News in the '30s, used to write a weekly bridge column as a side line. Long retired, he still likes to write an occasional article for us and the rest of this article will be a direct quote from him.

"Mrs. Morrow and I play a sort of JACOBY MODERN. My jump to three spades was a limit raise and Mrs. Morrow decided she had enough for a continuation to game.

"She ruffed the third heart lead; took one high trump and dummy's ace and king of clubs. Then she returned to her hand with a second trump in order to ruff her last club. It trumps had broken she would have been set for a sure elimination play.

"As it was she left East with one trump and led dummy's 10 of hearts. East saw no reason to waste a trump when his partner held the high heart but he saw the reason when Mrs. Morrow discarded her three of diamonds on the 10 of hearts and let West win the trick with his jack.

"This was the third and last trick for the defense

America's top experts explain their tournament-winning techniques in a new 128-page book on JACOBY MODERN. For your copy sent $1 with your name, address and zip code to: "Win at Bridge," (c/o this newspaper), P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

since West had to lead either a heart or a diamond. The heart lead would allow a ruff in dummy and a diamond discard. A diamond lead would be up to Mrs. Morrow's ace-queen."

We always enjoy hearing from our old friend. It is particularly nice to know that JACOBY MODERN is a system for all ages.

You took the plunge. You bought that old house you've had your eye on so long, and set about remodeling it.

You got a versatile contractor, and all went well until this happened. You were within a week of being finished when a thunderstorm left four inches of water in your redone basement.

You think it's the contractor's fault, since you paid him $600 for waterproofing. He says he did what he agreed to do, but that anybody knows you can't guarantee a dry basement in a 40-year-old house.

You still owe him $1,000 as the final payment on the job, but you're holding that up pending some settlement of the problem. He is threatening to take you to court.

What now? Give up and pay? Or hire a lawyer and fight?

You can do either, of course, but there is a third possibility. If you can get the contractor to agree to arbitration, you should be able to get a just settlement at a cheap price.

Arbitration is a simple process in which both sides explain their positions to a third party who makes a binding decision. The bulk of arbitration work is handled by the American Arbitration Association, which has offices in major cities across the country.

The AAA maintains a panel of some 16,000 men and women who stand ready to serve as arbitrators. They get paid nothing, but the AAA levies a fee based on the amount in contention. Some cases are solved for as little as $100.

To begin, you outline the problem on forms provided by the AAA. You and the contractor receive a list of potential arbitrators familiar with construction problems.

You each number them in order of your preferences, and from the two lists AAA makes a choice. Most disputes are heard by only one man. Those involving large sums may require panels.

A date is set for the hearing, and each of you is allowed to present his side of the affair. Lawyers can be present, but are not required.

If he deems it necessary, the arbitrator may even visit the remodeled home and check the facts firsthand.

Hammer Away but With Right One

By MR. FIX

If there is one tool, along with a screwdriver, that you will find in any house it is a hammer. The ordinary nail hammer is a widely used tool, though not the most wisely used.

Too often it isn't very wisely chosen either. After all, it's just a tool for pounding is the way the reasoning probably goes.

Poor quality hammers are plentiful and the risk of accident as well as poor work is greater with an inferior hammer than with other poor quality tools.

Avoid the cast iron heads that are the mark of a cheap hammer. Having a hammer break while pounding a nail or pulling one loose will spoil a job and possibly cause injury.

A good hammer is made of steel and has a durable, well-shaped handle to give it balance and make it easy to grip. The face of the hammer is smoothly polished and the edges are beveled. Sharp edges will mar your work and will chip eventually. The slot between the claws should be beveled so as to slip under the head of a nail easily and should form a sharp V to give a tight grip on small and headless nails.

You will find two types of nail hammer, a curved claw and a straight claw, also called a ripping claw. The latter is used for ripping and prying since the claw fits easily between boards. For home use get the curved claw. Either works, but the curve allows you to rock the hammer back and forth when pulling a nail and is less likely to mar surfaces.

The weight of a hammer refers to the head only. It will vary from seven to 28 ounces with 13 to 16 ounces being about the best range for average use. Heft a hammer before you buy it. It should be heavy enough to help with the work, light enough so you don't wear yourself out using it.

Don't keep a hammer near a heater of any kind. This will cause shrinkage in a wood handle and will cause the head to loosen. Also, avoid storing in a damp area. Aside from the problem of rust the moisture will cause the handle to swell.

Bobcats Win Over Prescott, Score 28-0

By BILL MOORE
Star Sports Writer

"Never again!" say the Hope Bobcats about losing any more ballgames. Why? Sorry if you missed it, but the Bobcats powdered the Curley Wolves of Prescott last night in Hammons Stadium, 28-0, before a large crowd.

Opening their home game season last night, the Cats, during the process of the game, molded a machine type offense together with a defense that even General Patton's tanks could not have penetrated.

Playing tough defense the Cats never allowed Prescott inside the 40 yard line of Hope and set up the first Bobcat score in the second quarter. Also the defense recovered a fumble and picked off two aeriels.

With Hope receiving the kickoff, the Cats drove from their own 30 yard line to the Curley Wolves 42 before turning the ball over on downs. Several more exchanges again gave the ball to Prescott while moving into the second quarter of play.

It was not until the clock showed 8:54 left in the first half, that Hope began to move. With the defense putting pressure on the Wolves the offense was gaining better field position all the time.

With Prescott facing second and 12 from their own 22 yard line with 5:45 left in the half, monsterman Rusty Quillen intercepted quarterback Freddie Wren's pass and legged it to the five yard line before he was hauled down. Two plays later Bobcat quarterback Tommy Frazier hit tight end Steve Harris in the end zone for a five yard touchdown pass with 5:02 left in the half.

Although the conversion was not successful, Hope still held a 6-0 lead.

Prescott's greatest threat came on the very next series when the Curley Wolves drove to the Bobcat 42 yard line in six plays, before a fourth down pass fell short of its mark.

After the half ended and the teams took a breather, the third quarter soon got underway with Hope starting where they left off. Consuming some of the time while backed up to the goal line, the Cat offensive unit ground out yardage to the enemy 37 yard line behind the running of Buddy Ingram and Rusty Quillen.

Three plays into the fourth quarter, an interference call gave Hope a first and ten on the Prescott 37 and two plays later Frazier connected with Quillen for a 37 yard scoring play with 10:16 left in the game. A pass to Ingram gave the Cats two points and a 14-0 lead.

Starting at their own 29, the Wolves gained three yards on the first play but a second down fumble put Hope back in business.

On the first play from scrimmage Ingram hauled down a Frazier pass at the one yard line and on the next play, David Johnson bulldozed over for the score with 8:30 remaining. Tim White's PAT sailed through the uprights for a 21-0 score.

With 7:03 left, the Cats got off another drive that took seven plays with Frazier running left end from two yards out for the last score. White again added the extra point for the final 28-0 score although the reserves just missed scoring again a few minutes later.

More details of the game will be in Mondays article while the next game will be at Sheridan next Friday. Also, there will be a B-team game at Magnolia Monday night at 7:30 p.m.

High School Football Roundup

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Little Rock Catholic picked a most opportune time to break through against Little Rock Hall.

The Rockets, in their Class AAAA debut, defeated the Warriors 22-15 Friday night. It was the Rockets' first victory over the Warriors since 1964 and coach George Loss' first triumph over C. W. Keopple in four tries.

Hall was ranked second, Catholic fifth before the game.

Roger Carter scored two touchdowns and rushed for 102 yards as top-ranked Fort Smith Northside routinely disposed of Marianna 35-14.

Hot Springs quarterback Ed French tossed two touchdown passes as the third-ranked Trojans defeated Jacksonville 21-0. Fourth-ranked Little Rock McClellan opened its Class AAA-East conference season with a 26-12 victory over Helena Central.

Sixth-ranked Rogers disposed of Region 1AA opponent Siloam Springs 27-12. Tailback Terry Smith scored twice to spark seventh-ranked Little Rock Parkview to a 28-0 victory over Fayetteville in a Class AAA-West conference game.

Robert Lee Steward ran wild as Forrest City, ranked eighth, clobbered Blytheville 46-17 in a Class AAA-East contest. Ninth-ranked Texarkana defeated cross-town rival Texarkana, Tex., 16-7 and 10th-ranked Stuttgart bombed West Memphis 31-7.

Pat Campbell led the Rockets' assault, scoring on runs of two, four and three yards. Campbell's third touchdown came late in the third quarter and gave the Rockets a 20-8 lead. Greg Martin's touchdown run put the Warriors back in the game but a pass interception by Mike Duke with less than two minutes remaining sealed the Warriors' fate.

Carter, the Grizzlies' workhorse, scored twice in the first half on runs of five yards each and then retired for the evening.

French threw an eight-yard touchdown pass to James White and completed a 12-yard scoring toss to Pete Campbell. Phil Longten broke a 0-0 tie late in the third quarter when he plunged across from one yard out.

McClellan never trailed Helena Central although the Cougars got as close as 7-6 on David Dille's five-yard scoring burst. A six-yard scoring run by John Thompson and a two-yard plunge by Virgil Peary gave the Lions a 20-6 lead.

Smith, who gained 113 yards on 24 carries, scored on runs of two and three yards as the Patriots rolled up a 21-0 half-time advantage.

Steward, who may be the best running back in east Arkansas, scored four touchdowns and rushed for 274 yards on 19 carries as the Mustangs demolished Blytheville.

Fullback Doyle Cross picked up 104 yards on 15 tries and scored once on a 26-yard run to spark Stuttgart, the defending Class AA state champion, past West Memphis, a Class AAA team.

In other AAAA action, LR Central blanked Pine Bluff 21-0 and El Dorado zipped past North Little Rock Northeast 18-7.

Quarterback Ralph Bradbury keyed the Central victory, passing 26 yards to Paul Burton for one touchdown and setting up the other two scores with long completions.

El Dorado took advantage of a blocked punt by Ricky Sewell and a pass interference call at the Northeast five to beat the Chargers. Mark Menefee, Bill Johnson and Paul Wood each scored once for the Wildcats.

North Little Rock quarterback David Haustine scored one touchdown and passed 36 yards to Joe Carter for another as the Class AAAA Wildcats knocked off AAA Jonesboro 13-0. Jonesboro, which has failed to score in two games this year, allowed a total of 14 points during the regular season last year.

Three other AAA teams fared better against lesser competition.

Fullback Dennis Leg scored twice as Springdale whipped Harrison 27-6. Quarterback Steve West threw two touchdowns passes as Fort Smith Southside crushed St. Anne's 41-12 and Benton blanked Sylvan Hills 14-0.

Athletes Train on Own Island

CANTON, China--(NEA)--Just a 15-minute boat ride from this city's central district across the muddy and broad waters of the Pearl River lies the island of Tai Shau Tau -- "Big Sandy Head" -- the secret winter training quarters for China's top athletes.

Few Westerners have been permitted to set foot on the isolated island, so that it came as a surprise when my half-joking request to visit it was granted. There was only one condition imposed--no cameras were allowed. Tai Shau Tau was classified as a "military object."

Whitewashed two-story cottages serve as dormitories for the athletes on Tai Shau Tau. There, for three months beginning each October, these hand-picked men and women are subjected to an intensive coaching and training program.

Sex is not only frowned upon in China's world of sports, it is practically nonexistent. The young men and women who annually troop to Tai Shau Tau are rigidly segregated in separate cottages. Security is strict, but an even greater deterrent against romance on the island is the threat of losing one's place on a national team.

Training, we were told by the chief coach and chairman of the revolutionary committee, Mr. Lam, begins each day at 5 a.m., when the athletes participate in an hour of strenuous warming-up exercises.

hearty and lavish. Thick rice gruel, South China's traditional morning meal, is served with half a dozen succulent meat, fish and vegetable side dishes, washed down with huge glasses of rich milk and topped with a variety of fruits for which the country around Canton is famous.

Then follows a two-hour rest period.

At 10 a.m. the day's work begins. Athletes, men and women, work without let-up for three straight hours at their specialties.

All activities include time off during the day for the athletes to indulge in an hour or more of contemplation based on the study of "Mao's thoughts." Faced with any problem, large or small, the athletes, according to our guide, turn to verses by Mao to try to discover an answer.

All of China's top sports stars have been through Tai Shau Tau. There are facilities for almost every kind of sport -- soccer, swimming, track and field, rowing, gymnastics, volleyball and, of course, table tennis. About two years ago three clay tennis courts, and one grass court were built, indicating that perhaps China might be thinking of playing in the Davis Cup rounds when she feels her players have reached the proper standards.

For "relaxation" after a hard day's training, movies of top world sports stars in action are shown. At these showings the films are run through many times, movements are slowed and analytical discussions follow. Food served the athletes is spectacular compared to that available to the average citizen. Communal kitchens are equipped with the most up-to-date facilities and are staffed by some of the country's top chefs. The best meats, poultry, fish and vegetables from Kwangtung Province are stocked in gargantuan quantities. The athletes are encouraged to eat as much as they wish. The island's larders have always been kept full, even during periods of drastic food shortages in other parts of China.

Good food, however, is but one of the many privileges accorded an athlete who achieves the coveted rank of "Sportsman of the Nation." The honor and glamor status accorded China's sports stars can only be compared to that which surrounds a top movie star. More important, perhaps, are the materialistic privileges -- special ration cards, priorities in traveling and housing and all the living comforts that can possibly be provided by a totalitarian society.

Achievements in the sports arena also carries with it the guarantee of secure, highly paid jobs. When not participating in national or international tournaments, star athletes are sent to coach and to teach their specialties to young people.

Every year thousands of young Chinese try to work their way up from village tournaments to provincial matches, hoping that they will catch the eye of some "scout" one day and be invited to participate at national team levels. The result is a constant flow of young sports aspirants all striving for the rank of "Sportsman of the Nation."

Pats' Goof Creates LA Brother Act

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

WEST COAST REPORT:

The boo-boo by the Boston (oops, New England) Patriots that unchained Phil Olsen to join big brother Merlin on the LA Rams could get guys in other businesses fired. They forgot to pick up the option on his contract. And under the curious laws of pro football, they still get recompensed for his loss.

Rap against young Olsen as a defensive lineman--any time you "cut" him (hit him low) he topples.

Track and field stars are just like bowlers now, under squeeze of pro sports. They do their thing for themselves. And during the U.S.-Russian meet, Igor Ovanesyan, the 33-year-old Russian long jump vet, confessed he was getting bored by the whole thing, like "sitting through four, five hours." "I feel old compared to these kids," he admitted, in English yet. "It's not the same as the first time against the Americans. People want to see stars. Then you had them--Perry O'Brien, Vladimir Kuts, Bob Richards, Dave Sims. The times and distances are as good now, but then you had a greater margin between first and second place finish." Ergo, by Russian logic, more outstanding stars.

Even Wisconsin's Pat Matzdorf couldn't get too excited about his world high jump record. "I don't like to improve too much too quick," he said after dizzily himself from 7-2 to a new top of 7-6¼. Matzdorf psyche trick: He stands farther from bar than other jumpers "so the bar doesn't look as high."

Funniest bit about Chip Oliver's return to Oakland Raiders was his initial visit with Coach John Madden. Chip stood on his head while talking to show Madden he was in shape. And emphasized that he should eat his own organic food. Madden agreed, if Chip got his weight up to 190. But he won't play safety--Raiders really got Tom Maxwell from Baltimore for that chore, freeing George Atkinson for corner job.

If you want to go behind scenes of why San Diego Chargers dumped Lance Alworth on Dallas, Coach Sid Gillman's convinced himself that the Lancer has lost his speed.

Steve Hamilton, who got a reprieve and a hair dye when the San Francisco Giants picked him up this spring, says he'll chuck pitching after this season and become a writer, too, like old teammate Jim Bouton. Only Steve won't reveal all. His bag is the great outdoors, and he already has a feeler from one national mag for a 20-grand column on hunting and fishing, plus an expense account to match.

Ah, Willie Mays, the beneficent one--he agreed to participate in a $500 charity offering... if they'd benefit the Willie Mays charity (himself) with a color TV set (also $500).

Former 49er Bruce Bosley has made his spare time pay off. For several years, he has bought old carriage houses on former estates in the Bay area and converted them to fancy homes. He lives in them for awhile, sells them off and then reconstructs another--doing most of the plumbing, carpentry and electrical work himself. Latest one, in Hillsborough on the peninsula south of SF, goes on the market soon for $200,000.

Don't know how it'll help the NY Knicks, but Jerry Lucas, their acquisition from the Warriors, has struck a golf ball 340 yards. He's also an amateur magician and word unscrambler. But can he still run?

Al Davis, the rajah of the Raiders, eavesdrops about offensive tackle Ron Mix's return to pro football with the Raiders, of course. "I still think he's the best player in football." Also the insurance Oakland needs in case controversial Bob Brown (ex-Ram) haughtily himself into disfavor.

Between you 'n' me, what Carroll Rosenbloom, rumored interested in the LA Rams, would really like to do is buy the West Coast team and let son Steve retain the Baltimore Colts. But the NFL would never agree.

Coming Next in Era of the Holdout?

By RALPH NOVAK

NEW YORK--(NEA)--The phone rang the other day while I was sitting down to write sympathy notes and checks to Fran Tarkenton. Sam McDowell, Duane Thomas and the entire National Basketball Association Players Assn. to tide them over in their time of trouble. The caller turned out to be a friend with some hot sports news from his neighborhood:

"Bobby Smith today stomped off the playing field and pedaled away on his 1971 sports bicycle, vowing he would never again play for the Elm Street Eagles. The 10-year-old strikeout ace said the Eagles had failed to meet his demands of three free milk shakes after every game, a lifetime supply of chocolate-covered popcorn and free piggyback rides from the coach in perpetuity.

"Ace quarterback Tommy Brown of the Elm Street Beagles, who shares a plush treehouse with Smith where they entertain all the neighborhood birds, is reportedly planning to join his longtime friend in a dual holdout.

"Cecil 'Grit' Harrison, who coaches both the Eagles and Beagles, said emphatically that he had made his final offer to both boys, two post-game milk shakes, a 45-year supply of chocolate-covered popcorn and free piggyback rides from his wife.

"Harrison drafted both youngsters right out of the maternity ward at Elm Street Hospital and has had them under a lifetime contract which keeps them from playing any sport in the world except Parchesi unless it is for one of his teams. 'One look at those big hands and feet and I knew I needed them,' Harrison is fond of saying.

"Both Smith and Brown said they would retire from sports forever and go into movies and private business rather than play for Harrison again. 'I hate to let down the rest of the team,' Smith said, 'especially my best friend, uh, Johnny or whatever his name is, but I've got a mother and father and my birds to look out for.'

"Harrison reportedly had arranged to trade Smith to the Central Avenue Cyclones for maverick All-Star catcher Harry Hands but canceled it when Smith fell down on the ground and threatened to hold his breath until he turned blue.

"Brown has gone into seclusion to work on his autobiography, 'How Humility Made Me the Greatest 10-Year-Old Player in History.'

"Reaction of local fans is hard to determine, since none has shown up at any games in the last three weeks. Local stores, however, report a sharp upsurge in the sale of mah-jongg and shuffleboard sets."

Isn't Ashamed of Epilepsy

SAN FRANCISCO--(NEA)--The story out of Montreal a year ago said that Hal Lanier, infielder for the San Francisco Giants, had slipped in the shower and would be out of the lineup for a week. It wasn't a distortion, but the story didn't tell it all.

Hal Lanier is an epileptic. He has had three major seizures in his life and this was his third.

There have been other major league baseball players who suffered from epilepsy. The late Tony Lazzeri was one. A man prominent in professional football is an epileptic. But epilepsy, a chronic disorder of cerebral functions characterized by paroxysms, used to be kept in the figurative hidden closet, something to be ashamed of, to keep secret.

Hal Lanier is different. He treats his illness as a fact of life and doesn't care who knows about it. In fact, he wants people, like his teammates on the Giants, to know.

"It benefits me," he says. Meaning it could also save his life.

When he went into convulsions in that Montreal hotel, Ron Hunt, then his roommate, pulled him out of the shower and stuck a finger between his teeth to prevent him from swallowing his tongue. That was because Ron knew.

Now, around his neck, Hal wears a medallion with the symbol of Medic Alert, a nonprofit foundation which has enrolled more than 430,000 members. And on it, in addition to his identifying number and an emergency phone listing, is engraved simply the word "epilepsy."

Hal didn't know he was a sufferer until 1964, when he was 22 years old.

"I can remember in high school," he says, "my hand moving involuntarily, but I didn't think anything of it and I never passed out. My first seizure was in 1962 when I was in the minors with the Fresno Giants, playing in Reno. It happened in a shower, too. I collapsed. Later I thought it might be the altitude and we weren't getting much sleep there, what with the card tables and all.
